Agreed, I would check out the Illini Roleplaying network if you are interested in tabletop RPGs. At the beginning of every semester, they run a gaming convention called Metacon, which is a great way to be introduced to the club.

If you are interested in board games, the club has Game Nights on Saturday evenings at 7pm in the English building.

There is a student fee that is used to fund the Daily Illini and they also get a decent amount of funding from other sources. Getting funding is important, but they need to make sure that they do not compromise their beliefs to do so.

I'm disappointed with them because the Daily Illini was strongly against Suburban Express earlier this

- Scala has significantly less boilerplate code than Java due to features such as type inference. For example, declaring an immutable point class in Scala simply involves typing in the following line:

class Point(val x:Int, val y:Int). Doing the same thing in Java would take a minimum of 6 lines of code.

- Scala's support for functional programming and use of first-class functions is really useful. `val res=numbers.foldRight(0)((a,b) => a + b)`, while doing the same in Java would require a for loop.
- Scala can use any existing Java library without any extra configuration. For example, the code add all the elements of list in Scala is:

The problem with Scala is that it can be very confusing due to the fact that there are often multiple ways of doing something. In that case, Python is a better choice.

There were ongoing tensions between the KMT and Communists, which made it difficult for the Chinese to deal with Japan. The tensions escalated into a full-scale civil war.

↓ I think higher education is really important as young people as it gives people the opportunity to learn more about important topics such as dinosaurs and the art of throwing snowballs. Colleges do a great job of educating people by giving students more creative freedom and removing pointless requirements that interfere with learning such as mandatory class attendance and excessive homework.

↓ Many people in Soviet occupied areas as Ukraine initially viewed the Germans as liberators because they hated Stalin. Germany would have benefited greatly if they had taken advantage of this.

Also, the Soviet manpower advantage was not very significant due to the fact that a large portion of the Soviet Union's population was occupied by Germany and the fact that the Red Army took significantly more casualties.

The real turning point was when Hitler decided to declare war on the US. Britain could not do much against Germany without outside help.

Considering learning Scala by Cthulukin in scala

[-] Gulugawa 3 points 1 month ago

Scala is a great language to learn if you have experience with Java. The ability to use Java libraries in your code without any complicated syntax is useful. The significant reduction in boilerplate and useful features such as support for functional programming make me wonder why I waited so long to learn Scala.

TL;DR: Java needs to fade into obscurity. Scala is a better version of Java.

Considering moving to Illinois for that sweet in-state tuition. Any tips? by [deleted] in UIUC

The savings will not be as much as you think. You said in your previous post that you were a University Achievement Scholar and you will lose the $12,000 per year that you get from it if you move in-state.

Also, you will have difficulty claiming in-state tuition if your parents are paying at least part of your tuition unless one of them lives in Illinois.

 Dennis sued Amtrak in 2004. <http://www.plainsite.org/flashlight/case.html?id=169252>

He has also gotten into legal battles several times in the past when attempting to defend his right to be a cybersquatter and he has been successful doing so. Without knowing more information about the Amtrak lawsuit, I would assume that he wanted some sort of financial reward or a court order restricting Amtrak's ability to provide competition to Suburban Express.

Dennis admits to being a professional cybersquatter on his website here: <http://toeppen.com/>

Alternative to Suburban Express by randomthrowi in UIUC

[-] Gulugawa 7 points 1 month ago*

Good work, Suburban needs more competition.

Are you willing to give more information about what you are doing? It would be great if members of this subreddit could mention your company as an alternative.

Suburban Express court date to vacate dismissals with prejudice to enable 20+ lawsuits to be reinstated: July 30th 1:30pm Ford County Courthouse by Oh-Yes-He-Did in UIUC

[-] Gulugawa 5 points 1 month ago

U of I should care about Suburban Express and attempt to take action against them. Despite a large amount of bad publicity, the "free market" has not done its job by putting them out of business. I'm staying in Urbana for the summer and I frequently see Suburban Express buses.

- Suburban Express has posted fliers in classrooms which is against U of I policy.
- They have filed frivolous lawsuits against many students and other transportation companies such as Peoria Charter and Amtrak.
- Suburban Express lawsuits often force students to get distracted from their studies to fight the lawsuits or find a way to pay the money when they can barely afford tuition.
- They have wasted U of I resources by attempting to file a FOIA request for a redditor that they were harassing.

Also, they had an exclusive deal with Greyhound to provide transportation to students in the 1980s and took action against other privately held companies by attempting to prevent them from providing competition.

Two superpowers are capable of having an antagonistic relationship and still be a peace with each other. Russia and the US never directly fought during the Cold War. With the current interdependence of the world economy and threat of nuclear war, a future conflict between two powers will not get worse than a 2nd Cold War.

I doubt the war will be started by a currently established country. Even the apparently "crazy" leaders such as Kim Jong un know that attempting to start WWIII is a bad idea. Conflicts such as the civil war in Syria will remain localized with major powers attempting to gain influence by fighting proxy wars.

It is also nearly impossible for non-state entities to start WWII, so I would not expect someone such as Mohammed Morsi to start WWII.

There are a large number of terrorist groups such as Al-Qaeda who have shown a strong dislike for Western governments combined with a willingness to use suicidal tactics. As a result, the only way I see WWII possibly happening is if one of these groups takes control of an established state such as Syria or Afghanistan.

↓ The drama started when Dennis Toeppen(owner of bus company) attempted to sue the moderator of r/uiuc for posting a banner on the subreddit warning people to stay away from his bus company. Many people already disliked the company based on complaints such as rude staff, bad customer service and insulting customers. The banner was put up because of those facts and because r/uiuc found out that Dennis was suing customers.

Aside from suing him, he has done the following.

*Attempted to get personal information about redditor from the University of Illinois. *He has sued at least 100 people for questionable reasons such as "bad conduct", accidentally giving the wrong ticket, or posting bad reviews. *He had the court proceedings take place in a city not easily accessible to the people getting sued. *He has repeatedly posted on Reddit using sockpuppet accounts. Many of them were created to impersonate or mess with other redditors. *He has insulted several of his customers on his website. *In the 1990s, he was a professional cybersquatter.

This sounds like the work of a professional troll. He is on track to become the next Anne Coulter or Fred Phelps. Aside from suing the redditor, here is what he has done.

- Attempted to get personal information about redditor from the University of Illinois.
- He has sued at least 100 people for questionable reasons such as "bad conduct", accidentally giving the wrong ticket, or posting bad reviews.
- He had the court proceedings take place in a city not easily accessible to the people getting sued.
- He has repeatedly posted on Reddit using sockpuppet accounts.
- He has insulted several of his customers online.
- In the 1990s, he was a professional cybersquatter.

↓ As a UIUC student who has been following this story closely, I think he is a professional troll and is not an idiot. His actions seem like a way to get attention, mess with people and provoke people into doing things he can legitimately sue for. Being a professional troll has worked out well for Anne Coulter and the members of the Westboro Baptist

Too bad he seems to be forgetting that his actions will eventually cause his company to loose customers and go bankrupt.

Initially, I thought the owner was simply a person with mental issues who was trying to enforce the ridiculous rules he had in his Terms and Conditions. At this point, I think he is a professional troll who is trying to generate controversy to boost his ego and find excuses to sue people. The same strategy worked really well for the Westboro Baptist Church.

↓ At this point, I think Dennis is a professional troll like Fred Phelps or Anne Coulter who is trying to get attention by doing and saying things that people strongly disagree with. I thought Dennis would come to his senses by now and at least act like he has learned his lesson instead of acting like a professional troll. This and attempting to ask UIUC for confidential information about the r/UIUC moderator has convinced me otherwise.

It would be best if we focused on organizing boycotts, helping out people being affected by Dennis and see if there is a way to file harassment claims against him.

↓ Im Indian and arranged marriages are not a bad thing based on my experience. My parents and most of my relatives my relatives have been in arranged marriage. Based on my interactions with them, the marriages have mostly been successful and divorce/ separation is very rare.

Also an arranged marriage usually does not involve two people being forced to marry. It generally involves the parents or other adults introducing two people to each other followed by a marriage after a short period of time if both people agree.

↓ I don't think he is a troll as trolls typically do stuff to get attention or create controversy. Dennis is trying to promote Suburban Express with his actions on Wikipedia and he trying to prevent people from saying bad things about them. His attempts to publicly shame people who are "bad" customers probably represents an imbalanced emotional response.

Dictators throughout history have also attempted to go too far in suppressing dissent and frequently attempt to publicly shame people. Often when they are challenged, they become more aggressive in suppressing dissent and denouncing their enemies and normally do not attempt to reform their behavior. For example, Assad has been responding to people challenging him over the past two years by using the Syrian army to crack down on dissent and put people in jail. Also, he frequently emphasizes the fact that his enemies are terrorists. He has not "learned" his lesson either.

What do you think is the biggest mistake made by a single human in the history of the world? by thejokeisonus in AskReddit

[-] Gulugawa 1 point 4 months ago

Invading Russia was not a mistake. Stalin had plans to attack Germany, and Russia had natural resources such as oil and grain that Germany needed.

The Russian army was in a really weak state after the purges in the 1930s and was not prepared to fight a major war. When they attacked Finland in 1939, it took them 4 months to win and suffered 5x the casualties despite having a significant numerical advantage. Also many people living in the Soviet Union strongly disliked Stalin and initially viewed the Germans as liberators. Hitler could have welcomed these people as allies so that he would have millions of Soviets willing to fight him instead of focusing too much on the racial superiority of Aryans.

Russia was dangerously close to losing and only survived because of a bunch of poor strategic decisions that Hitler made in addition to an abnormally cold winter and a non-aggression pact with Japan. In late 1941, the Russian army had lost millions of men and was practically out of reserves. At the end of 1941, around 75 million people from the Soviet Union were under German occupation in addition to a large amount of natural resources and other Soviet assets. The population of the Soviet Union was around 200 million, so that meant that the Soviet Union effectively had around 125 million people available to fight. Germany had a population of around 80 million people at that time, so their manpower deficit was not too significant, especially when you consider the fact that the Russians lost significantly more troops than the Germans, even during the later years of the war.

Hitler split the German army into 3 groups for Barbarossa and wasted a large amount of time shuffling troops between the 3 groups, which caused him to fail to take strategic targets such as Moscow and Leningrad. To make things worse, he decided to declare war on the US in December 1941, which meant that he had to divert crucial resources away from fighting Russia. He continued to make poor decisions throughout the war such as refusing to allow troops in Stalingrad to attempt a breakout after they were surrounded.

I also think there is a good chance that SubEx will not be relevant at all in 4-5 years too because the market can change rapidly. Two years ago, it seemed like LEX was doing well and I did not know about Peoria Charter despite the fact that I was a student here. Now LEX is gone and a large portion of the student body uses Peoria Charter. UIUC students have lost a great deal of respect for SubEx over the past year for their actions and it will be reflected in the bus company they decide to use.

I also felt that the incident about Jeremy Leval wasn't a big deal until SubEx made a huge deal about the incident and ended up suing Leval and a bunch of other people in a place 30 minutes away that was difficult for students to access.

Also, for everyone who is downvoting this, talltroll3

Several months ago, my friend told me about a board game club that had weekly meetings, but I was too focused on classes to consider going.

In January, it was the beginning of a new semester of college, so I decided to try going to the club's meetings. As a result, going to meetings and playing board games became a major part of my weekly routine.

My experiences at the club motivated me to find a hobby that involved designing computer games based on mechanics I learned from board games. I also had problems talking to females before that(I'm a guy), which going to meetings helped me fix.

What if China attempts to capture Taiwan?by Oriental_Rug in FutureWhatIf[-] Gulugawa 1 point 5 months ago

If the US got involved, then the war would end up in a stalemate and China would eventually sue for peace. The US can easily take control of the Taiwan Straits with its navy and China would not be able to do anything. However, there would be a severe economic crisis because the US and China would probably cut off trade relations.

There is also a strong chance that the US would not get involved. If that happened, then Chinese victory would be a forgone conclusion if they were willing to put in the effort.

I mostly agree with what you said, but I don't see Russia being able to mobilize 20 million people. ↓ The severity of that storm from 2 years ago justified a snow day despite the low snow amounts due to all the ice and sleet. I walked to the Union on the day after the storm for the career fair without realizing that most companies were not able to come, and many of the sidewalks were covered in ice. SimCity modder removes always online forced disconnects, possible to play game offline forever. by xapped in Games

In addition to being a complete PR failure, this game is an example of picking the wrong tool for a job. As a software developer, this thread makes me wonder why large portions of the game code was written in Javascript. Picking a scripting language that has a large performance overhead for an "agent-based simulation" game is a bad idea. They should have gone with a faster language such as C++ so that they could have increased the number of agents in the game.

Also, I don't think all the closings were due to people overreacting. For example, several of my teachers in school cited being cautious due to the threat of lawsuits and other issues. Once, a teacher slipped and had to go to the hospital because FCPS did not do anything about the black ice that had formed the night before.

 I also noticed a lack of accuracy in the "snow models" and the fact that they consistently seem to overestimate the amount of frozen precipitation. They have generally been accurate for major storms such as Snowmageedon, but they frequently seem to fail with smaller storms or when temperatures are close to freezing.

I've been in Illinois for the past two years and the "snow models" here are significantly more accurate. However, the precipitation here usually falls as all rain or all snow, so the models don't often have to deal with borderline freezing temperatures.

 I agree, TJ was a high stress place when I attended due to the fact that some students and held themselves and others to narrow-minded high standards, especially when with beliefs such as the fact that a B+ was considered failing. For example, many people believed that taking AP Physics as a junior without previous physics experience was a god idea.

During the end of my senior year, I was talking about where I was going to college and my friend asked in a condescending manner: "Why would you want to go there?" when I was going a top-ranked engineering college.

I hope the administration is taking steps to change things.

 The horror anecdotes are probably from juniors without previous physics experience. I took AP Physics with Dr. Dell 3 years ago and many of the juniors in the class frequently talked about the difficulty of the course. Also, Dr. Dell gave boring lectures and his extra credit consisted of giving physics problems during lunch. However, his grading was not too hard and he made interesting jokes.

 What is going on?

When I took Algebra 2 6 years ago, the average grade was somewhere around a B+/A-. Math teachers at TJ recognized the intelligence of TJ students and realized that most of them deserved at least a B. I find it surprising that that the average skills of TJ students have declined so rapidly/the teachers suddenly got more strict with grading.

permalink context full comments \(53\)

[\[-\]](#) Gulugawa 2 points 6 months ago

Wow, this is sad. People who lack basic math skills should not be applying to TJ, especially with the difficulty of the math and physics classes here.

On the other hand, when I attended TJ from 2006-2010, there was also an issue with the administration attempting to have really high standards. For example, they encouraged many juniors to take AP Physics C without any previous physics experience. Many students succeeded to their intelligence and work ethic, but most of them would've been better off taking AP Physics after having a background in physics due to the way people learn. Also, all juniors were encouraged to take AP US History to the point where the administration had trouble finding enough students to take the regular version of the course.

I went to TJ from 2006 to 2010 and it was a great experience with the a few exceptions. Most of the people there are great, and being able to get involved in hands-on projects with the tech labs was fun.

Going to TJ will help you significantly in college admissions as long as you aren't applying to popular East Coast schools and or several other elite schools. I got rejected from UVA, but I ended up with a generous merit scholarship to a top-ranked engineering school despite the fact that I was a below average student at TJ with respect to GPA and SAT score.

The STEM classes at TJ are excellent preparation for college. I'm majoring in computer science right now, and the programming courses I took at TJ made things significantly easier for me. Also, many college courses are significantly easier than their TJ equivalent. My Chemistry class was supposed to be on the level of AP Chemistry, but almost all of the material was stuff I learned in my non-AP Chemistry class.

$200 billion seems like a really high number. Do you mean $200 million?

I agree that spending too much adding highway lanes is not a very cost effective way of lessening traffic, but the Beltway could use more lanes assuming that it is not too expensive.

Many companies have major issues with work-life balance due to the fact that they pressure employees to work from home. Also, based on my experience, collaboration is significantly harder when you cannot meet in person.

Mayer's actions are probably a step in the right direction as long as they help people relocate and are more understanding of people who have legitimate reasons to not come to work.

As a student a university with a large number of Koreans, I can confirm that most of them only talk to other Koreans. However, I feel like they do that because they are not used to American culture and feel comfortable talking to other Koreans. If I went to a university in Korea, I probably would spend most of my time interacting with other Americans.

Many people here do not have a lot of money and many of them are on student loans. As a result, they should not be forced to pay additional fees, especially if there are having difficulty paying for tuition. If they want to implement a mandatory fee, it should only be for people who have extra money to spend. If the Student Government needs money, I will gladly donate at least $10 if they give me an easy way to do so such as allowing me to charge the donation to my student account.

Threats like this are making me increasingly convinced that maintaining the status quo with North Korea is a bad idea. Our best option involves finding some way to work with China and South Korea to prepare for a North Korean collapse and cut off their supplies.

The cost of dealing with North Korea is going to keep on rising as they develop more advanced weapons. Also, their government is unlikely to collapse in the near if we continue our current policy of dealing with them.

Virginia gov would really like everyone to stop talking about GOP's sneak redistricting now by Gates9 in politics

[-] Gulugawa 21 points 7 months ago

As someone who is from Northern Virginia, I agree. One of the few areas where Virginia has been having success is the economy and that is only due to massive federal spending that is directly creating jobs. In areas such as transportation and women's rights, they have been a complete failure.

Virginia gov would really like everyone to stop talking about GOP's sneak redistricting now by Gates9 in politics

[-] Gulugawa 9 points 7 months ago

Based on his abysmal record as governor, I don't see him having a legitimate reason to not block the GOP's redistricting plan.

As someone who has lived in Northern Virginia, I agree that our government has been a failure. The main reason why our economy has been doing well over the past decade is all the jobs that the US government has created in the area.

We have the worst traffic in the nation and McDonnell has not done a good job of fixing the problem. For example, one day last summer, it took me 30 more minutes than normal to get home from work because I took a wrong turn and got stuck in traffic. One of McDonnell's "solutions" is to implement a regressive sales tax when there are a bunch of upper middle class and rich people who can easily afford to pay more. Him and the rest of the government were also responsible for the "solution" of creating premium toll lanes which require installing a device on your car that could be potentially used to track you. His only achievement was to help start the construction of a new Metro line which should have been constructed several decades ago.

TL;DR McDonnell has been a failure as Virginia's governor and should not be trusted to have a legitimate reason to not block the GOP's redistricting plan.

 Infrastructure in the US is in serious need of some investment right now. For example, India currently has significant problems with traffic and producing electricity which is partially due to a lack of infrastructure investment. In addition to temporarily creating jobs, infrastructure improvements will significantly benefit the US in the long term.

 You are right that this bill would create jobs and stimulate the economy. However, investments in infrastructure or a tax cut for middle class Americans would be better.

 [\[-\]](#) Gulugawa 3 points 1 year ago*

 It is a good thing that they Republicans blocked this bill. With this bill, we will basically be playing a negative sum game where we will gain jobs at the expense of other countries while our tax revenue goes down. If other countries attempt to give tax breaks, the results will be even worse. If the Democrats want to create jobs, they should spend the money on something more useful such paying to repair our aging infrastructure.

There are plenty of other useful bills that the Republicans have blocked, we should focus on those.

 I'm the current president and one of the founding members of the Illini Chess Club. Here is my advice.

- Find 4 other members and register your club ASAP, it will be significantly harder to recruit members if you wait until the school year starts.
- Try to get a booth for Quad Day, it will help significantly with recruiting. We did not start the Illini Chess Club until the school year started. As a result we had issues with recruitment because we missed Quad Day *Create a website for your club and host it on your NetFiles account here: <https://netfiles.uiuc.edu>. Your club does not have to be registered to do this and you do not need programming experience.

Take the credit for Physics 212. I decided to take Physics 212 for the "easy" A despite the fact that I had AP credit. I ended up spending 8 hours a week despite the fact that I didn't do anything beyond what was required. I haven't taken Physics 211, but it appears to have a similar workload. There are more productive ways to spend your time that do not involve spending 8 hours a week for an "easy" A.

↓ While people should be earning more than the minimum wage, a minimum wage salary is enough to afford an apartment. At that salary, a person working 40 hours a week for 52 weeks earns $15,000 per year.

In Urbana, Illinois, which is a small city 2 hours south of Chicago, most apartments have a rent of far less than $1000 per year with utilities included. Many of my friends pay less than $500/month for rent and still get decent apartments. Your only other major expenses will be food, clothing, and insurance; having a car is not necessary here.

↓ While people should be earning more than the minimum wage, a minimum wage salary is enough to afford an apartment. At that salary, a person working 40 hours a week for 52 weeks earns $15,000 per year.

In Urbana, Illinois, which is a small city 2 hours south of Chicago, most apartments have a rent of far less than $1000 per year with utilities included. Many of my friends pay less than $500/month for rent and still get decent apartments. Your only other major expenses will be food, clothing, and insurance; having a car is not necessary here.

Redditors in VA's 11th district: I'm a redditor running as an independent for Congress. Can you help? by Marchetti4Congress in nova

[-] Gulugawa 1 point 1 year ago

In one of your previous posts, you mentioned how you are willing to significantly cut federal spending in order to deal with the federal deficit. Since our district depends heavily on federal spending due to the fact that many of us work for the government, how are you going to protect our economy when federal spending is cut?

Nevertheless, despite any issues I may have with your policies, it is nice to have an alternative to Conolly or the Republican candidate.

Many of the students in the LLC have some interest in entrepreneurship and there are several relevant events during the year such as guest lectures from entrepreneurs.

I'm not exactly sure about your chances of getting in. However many people get placed in the LLC as one of their last choices, so you have a good shot as long as you submit the housing application soon and write the LLC essay.

[-] Gulugawa 1 point 1 year ago

The LLC is one of the most social floors in ISR. Currently, there are around 15 guys returning to the LLC next year and I am one of them. However, the LLC was formed two years ago and is basically in "beta mode" right now. As a result, the special programs and events currently offered by the LLC are underwhelming. If you are looking for special programs, you are better off joining an RSO.

TL;DR. The programs offered by the LLC are not great, but joining the LLC is great if you want to live

↓ Although many of the concepts in CS 225 are covered in CS 173, you will not have major problems taking them concurrently. However, I recommend completing CS 173 before taking CS 225. Also, the first assignment in CS 225 is a review on the concepts in CS 173. It will be easy if you have taken CS 173; you will find it more difficult if you have not completed the course.

I'm an incoming CS major freshman from CA. Can somebody help me out :P by woo00154 in UIUC

1. ISR has a reputation for being antisocial, but it is a great place if you like being around engineers and it has the best location. I am returning to ISR next year as a junior and I personally like everything about ISR except for the food. If you are looking for a more social/party dorm, you should sign up for one of the Ikenberry dorms. However, you will be far away from your classes.
 2. Your adviser will be able to help you with signing up for classes. I suggest not repeating classes that you got credit from high school unless the concepts are important for future classes. Since you are a CS major, none of your AP credits correspond to classes you will need in CS. However, based on your situation, you should take CS 125 and CS 173 during your first semester.

3. I am not in a Frat so I can't answer this question.
4. Make sure that you go to the career fairs. Also, as I mentioned previously, do not waste your time retaking courses. Instead, use the extra time to take additional CS courses or start a personal project. Employers will be far more impressed by knowledge of CS and personal projects than they will be by retaking classes for an easy A. If you get a job, make sure it is in something related to CS, this will greatly help you when you are searching for an internship.
5. CS focuses more on programming and theory, and ECE focuses more on hardware. Currently, more companies are looking for CS majors than ECE majors, which currently works in your favor.
6. Avoid private loans unless you are only taking them out in small amounts. Private loan companies are very unforgiving and will force you to pay money without any regard to personal hardships that you may face. If you can't find a way to pay for UIUC without taking out private loans, you should go to a community college for a year. Even UIUC is not worth taking out large private loans.

I think most of the Republicans are smart enough to realize the damage they are doing to the economy. IS CS 231/232 hard? by HURRRDURRRRRHNNNG in UIUC

Gulugawa 3 points 1 year ago

I took 231 with Garzaran and I am currently taking 232 with Zilles. There are two lecture sections and Garzan and Zilles are the professors.

Garzaran is an awful teacher, you will learn more by reading the lecture notes than you will in her lectures. Zilles is far better and the quality of his lectures makes it worth attending them at 9am. Despite the fact that the material in CS 232 is hard and the material in CS 231 is easy, I found CS 231 to be a hard class due to the fact that listening to Garzaran's lectures is just as bad as skipping class. There is a strong possibility that each professor will teach a lecture section, so the difficulty of the course will be based on who is your lecturer. I would strongly suggest not signing up for another class between 9 and 11am so you will be able to go to the lecture section that Zilles is teaching.

tl;dr CS 233 is being taught by one of the worst professors in the CS department and one of the best CS professors, the difficulty will be based on which one is giving the lectures.

I became an Eagle Scout in 2010 and my troop leader specifically said that saying you are atheist or gay at a board of review would automatically cause you to fail and not get Eagle Scout. Our troop was located near Washington DC, but many of the adult leaders were from military families, which probably had a significant effect on the attitudes in my troop. We basically had a "Don't Ask, Don't Tell Policy". I feel that there can be valid reasons why gay people cannot be in Boy Scouts, but having to believe in a god is completely ridiculous. However, despite the flaws of the BSA, Boy Scouts is a great way for kids to meet new friends and learn leadership skills.

What are some seemingly gross foods or food combos you just love? by mordicai in AskReddit

[-] Gulugawa 1 point 1 year ago

- Ice cream mixed with Cherry Coke, Oreos, and sprinkles
- Peaches and Oreos
- Spaghetti with croutons.
- Microwaved waffle batter mixed with sprinkles, Oreos, and Froot Loops.

I live in a college dorm and the cafeteria food gets old, so I like to experiment with strange food combinations.

I permanently deleted my Facebook account a month ago, and I have no intention of creating a new account or creating a Google+ account. As a college student, my social life has improved since I got rid of my Facebook since I communicate with many of my friends in real-life instead of on Facebook. For keeping in touch with friends outside college, gmail is a far better, because it allows you to do more than send plain text messages and it has a better chat system.

I became an Eagle Scout in 2010 and my troop leader specifically said that saying you are atheist or gay at a board of review would automatically cause you to fail and not get Eagle Scout. Our troop was located near Washington DC, but many of the adult leaders were from military families, which probably had a significant effect on the attitudes in my troop. We basically had a "Don't Ask, Don't Tell Policy". I feel that there can be valid reasons why gay people cannot be in Boy Scouts, but having to believe in a god is completely ridiculous. However, despite the flaws of the BSA, Boy Scouts is a great way for kids to meet new friends and learn leadership skills.

 For profit prisons are a terrible idea as several people have already pointed out. The goal of a prison should be to house prisoners and rehabilitate people so that they are able to lead a crime-free life after leaving prison. On the other hand, a for-profit company goal is to maximize profit, which means in the case of prisons that prisoners will be held in poor conditions without attempts at rehabilitation due to the desire to make money.

↓ I took CS 225 honors last semester. Your grade consists of doing 3 C++ programming assignments and applying parallel programming techniques, which I found to be fun. You also have teach two 2 hour review sessions on CS 225 topics with a partner.

I'd say that the review sessions will take up 6-10 hours of time. The programming assignments are not too hard, but you will be screwed if you wait until the last few weeks to start them. I started the assignments 2 weeks before they were due. Due to final exam stress, I made a stupid mistake on the maze generation assignment so that my code created unsolvable mazes and mazes with cycles in addition to many other dumb mistakes.

↓ Agreed TJ accepts applications from an area of about 2 million people, and many of the kids who apply have highly educated parents, which helps explain why students are so smart.

Using state standardized tests to rank schools is also bogus. For example, the SOL state tests given in Virginia are pathetic. Teachers at TJ openly make fun of the test and neither them nor the students take the tests seriously.

The focus on using AP tests to rank schools is also bogus. For example, Stuyvesant High School is considered to be one of the best high schools in the nation, but it is ranked #31 because of a policy limiting the number of AP courses students could take. Apparently, students at Stuy can take a limited number of APs, which probably explains their "low" ranking.

↓ I think that TJ's administration is obsessed with prestige and things have become worse since US News started ranking us 4 years ago. This can be seen by the efforts of faculty members to increase the number of AP courses taken. When I was a student there, people were practically forced to take AP US History and AP English and the honors level courses for them were not always available. But I think the worst manifestation of the TJ administration's obsession with prestige can be seen by the fact that juniors are encouraged to sign up for AP Physics C when it is a lot wiser to take it senior year after some preparation.

This website for AP Physics C at TJ shows the difficulty of the material and the fact that it is unsuitable for a first-year physics class. One of the most disturbing things I found in the syllabus was the fact that is said that the number of people taking AP Physics as juniors is increasing. When I took AP Physics C as a senior, between 10-20% of juniors were in the course; there are serious problems if that percentage has gone up. Here is the course website: <http://tjphysics.org/>

I believe that the US News ranking of high schools will encourage other high school administrations to become obsessed with prestige.

I went to TJHSST from 2006-2010 and I noticed that TJHSST's #1 ranking encouraged an elitist attitude among students of the school including myself. Our #1 ranking is questionable due to the fact that it is based off of AP scores, which are not the sole indicator of a school's quality.

I think the TA's made the exams too, Professor Garzaran does not appear to care about teaching as seen by her awful lectures.

[-] Gulugawa 5 points 1 year ago*

Same here, I can learn more by reading the lecture slides for 50 minutes than I can listening to Professor Garzaran. I found the material in CS 231 to be easy, but the graders love to arbitrarily take off points. For the decoder question on the first midterm, I got a 0 because I assumed that D3 was the most significant bit instead of D0 despite the fact that my circuit was identical to the solution.

Since you already have programming experience from ECE 190, the only major concept you will learn in CS 125 is object-oriented programming. As a result, I would not recommend spending time taking CS 125.

Do not take CS 225. I am in CS 225, and I initially had a lot of trouble with pointers and memory management despite the fact that I had 5 years of experience programming beforehand in Java. A large portion of the course is spent implementing data structures such as quadrees and linked lists and it is not easy.

↓ Pulling off an all-nighter does not make you better than other people. Even if you are not doing work at the last minute an all nighter as a terrible idea as you will find it difficult to concentrate the next day. I think it is a better idea to get drunk because you can at least get some sleep after you are done partying and actually be able to focus later the next day.

↓ I'm a CS major taking Hist 141 as a gen ed and it is probably my hardest class. Even though I may spend more time on my technical classes, they are somewhat easier because I know how to study and get good grades in them. In Hist 141, the tests consist of identifying the historical importance of certain terms and writing a historical essay, which are two things that I am not very good at.

Why do all of you engineers think so highly of yourselves? by LiIDai in UIUC

↑ [-] Gulugawa 1 point 1 year ago

↓ I think one of the main reasons that engineers here think so highly of themselves is due to the fact that UIUC is one of the world's top engineering schools. I don't think this is a pattern unique to UIUC. After my high school was ranked by US News, I noticed that a lot of my classmates started thinking really highly of themselves. Nevertheless, the majority of the engineering majors here are really nice, and most of my close friends are in engineering.
