Take the Metra to Union Station, then the Amtrak to CU. Amtrak has huge seats, outlets, and is pretty damn quick (just over 2 hours...no bs traffic). It will also only be $15 for certain rides.

I did it from the NW burbs last weekend.

I think we agree to disagree. Not everything is always "extremely clear cut". Every student should have the right to a defense. Also, lawyers have fought (and I believe won) against Suburban Express and SLS have spoken out against Suburban Express as seen here:

I also don't know of any other companies that have sued 120+ of its customers.

I've heard him talk about how he likes to ride a bike and almost hit asians because they apologize even though he's clearly in the fault. This guy is 100% psycho and legit needs to be under some sort of watch program.

permalink parent

OP, I think you should also consult a lawyer (Student Legal Service seems the obvious choice; they are familiar with Suburban Express and its activities). The university hasn't done anything about this issue till now, but now the Suburban Express guy is defacing public/university property and using university resources like noticeboards in campus buildings to harass and intimidate students. This should be reported to someone in the university administration, though I am not sure who is the correct person. UIUC has a duty to protect its students from harassment, and not be passive and refuse to do anything because they fear lawsuits.

I would have suggested ISS too, but after their lip-service-only performance last time ("we will write to the Attorney General" - something from which nothing ever materialized), I don't know if approaching them will be worth your time.

If a prospective undergraduate/graduate student or faculty were visiting, and saw those flyers, it wouldn't reflect well on the university. This is much more hurtful to the university's image than the ads he keeps posting in classrooms and noticeboards despite being told not to. It is high time the university at least acknowledges this menace, and imposes sanctions on him and his company's operations on campus.

Yes, although it's not sanctioned by Reddit whatsoever. It also costs $3.99 a month to use, and it's limited to Firefox (as Reddit forced Google to remove it from Chrome). I'm not suggesting everyone go out and buy it, of course, but I bought it just to recover those two comments, and probably won't renew.
